

Ohio State's ASL Elementary-Level Teaching Certificate

Designed to develop and enhance the teaching skills of those fluent in ASL.

Ohio State's 100% online American Sign Language (ASL) Elementary-Level Teaching Certificate prepares fluent signers and current instructors to teach at the community or college level. Taught fully in ASL, the program combines formal study and hands-on training in linguistics, intercultural competence, and effective teaching methods. Graduates gain practical experience, career insights, and access to Ohio State's resources to meet the growing demand for skilled ASL educators. Note: this certificate does not lead to ASLTA certification or teaching licensure.

Why choose Ohio State's ASL Elementary-Level Teaching Certificate?

- World class faculty: Courses are taught in ASL by faculty with extensive teaching experience in one of the nation's largest university-level ASL programs, serving approximately 1,500 students per semester in a program that offers general education courses, a minor, and a forthcoming major.
- Top-ranked education: Ohio State, ranked #15 among public universities, is a leader in higher education. Earning a certificate opens doors to new opportunities and a powerful professional network.
- Career-focused learning: With no residency requirement, you can earn your certificate from anywhere. Take one course at a time while balancing your personal and professional commitments and complete the entire program in less than a year. This program also includes a unique course to equip you with the tools to successfully obtain and retain employment in academic settings.
